We managed to successfully complete our stories in time for the deadline.

We managed this by finding the critical path and strongly prioritizing important tasks with a lot of blockers. Also, because this was our third sprint, we had a good idea of what people were capable of doing so we assigned people according to their strengths. Additionally, people who had to learn new frameworks and APIs were given those as their larger tasks so they could have more time to figure things out.

Since we knew that a group member would be getting their COVID-19 vaccine, we gave them tasks that had a lot of blockers, so they could recover while the blockers were resolved. As a result, they were able to complete their tasks after getting the vaccine with minimal interruptions to progress.
